

LIGHTS, CAMERA, ACTION BRINGING A DONOR STORY TO LIFE ON FILM

Born into a humble family, NUS alumnus Mr Lee Kok Wah (Arts '69) completed his secondary and tertiary education thanks to a bursary and scholarship from the late banker and philanthropist Tan Sri Dr Tan Chin Tuan. After retiring from a successful career in the corporate, finance and capital markets, he set up the Mr and Mrs Lee Wai Kin Bursary at NUS in honour of his late parents. His story is brought to life on film and can be viewed at www.giving.nus.edu.sg/news-events/video-gallery.

We are very grateful to all who participated in the filming of this video, whether behind the scenes or in front of the camera. Thank you for joining us in telling a true and wonderful story of our NUS alumnus, who overcame the odds to become who he is today. We are especially thankful to Mr Lee for recognising the importance of spreading the spirit of Paying It Forward.

A room at the Lee Kuan Yew School of Public Policy was used to represent Mr Lee's first office.

Student recipients Ng Jun Yi, Nabilah bte Mohamed Razalie and Au Yong Shi Sien (from left).

Young Corwin Ong plays Mr Lee when he was a little boy.

Actor Benjamin Josiah Tan plays Mr Lee from his teenage years to a young working adult.

Actress Carey Ou plays teenage Mr Lee's teacher, who gives him good news.

An old kampong in Buangkok was used to portray the young Mr Lee's house in the 1950s. Actors playing the young Mr Lee and his grandmother cook a potato for his school lunch.

Photos by OHBOY! Pictures Pte Ltd and Ahmad Iskandar Photography.

To find out more about creating a named bursary, scholarship or professorship, please contact askdvo@nus.edu.sg or call 1-800-DEVELOP (1-800-338-3567).

The kampong house was painstakingly populated with items from the 1950s, put together by the creative props team after much research.